INTERESTING TIDBITS

If you are looking for a lost member of your family the Social Security Office may be able to help you. Write a letter to this "missing" person, enclose it stamped, unsealed envelope and send it to your local SS Office. After checking its contents to be sure that it is neither illegal, or immoral, or threatening, the SS Office will send it on to the addressee. Be sure to include the dates of birth and the parents names of the addressee, since there may be many people with the same name. In order to insure privacy of the person to whom the letter is addressed, the SS office will not tell you the address or even if the letter has been delivered. Of course, the recipient is not required to answer the letter, but it is worth a try to see if you can get an answer.
